SEASONS GREETINGS

Twas the night before Christmas.

And all throughout the town,

Not a faucet was dripping for miles around.

The plumber, it seems, had done his job well,

And now had retired for the holiday spell.

At home with his family to help trim the tree and thankful to God for the right to be free.

When all of a sudden came a knock at the door,

Come quick to the church, there's a flood on the floor.

Gone in a flash with his tool box in tow,

From the warmth of the hearth out into the snow.

Down to the church where the people were praying for someone to stop the water from spraying.

Then all in a body they joyfully cheered
at the door the plumber quickly appeared.

He studied a moment, then climbed on a bench,
a master of motion, this man with a wrench.

A twist of the wrist; all done with such ease
in seconds, the water did cease.

All eyes were upon him, as the throng did believe They'd see a real Santa on this Christmas Eve.

With a wink of his eye, he called back in flight,
"Merry Christmas to All and to All, a Good Night!"
